MARINES TO "HIKE" TO GETTYSBURG AND RETURN

With the movement of a company of Marines from the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., by Eagle boat to Quantico, Va., to join with the larger force there on Wednesday, one of the greatest and most comprehensive of troops maneuvers in the history of the United States in time of peace began.

The remainder of the week will be given over to the arrangement of the Marine Regiments into the formation they will take on the march to Gettysburg, Pa., which starts Monday, June 19, with the movement of the entire force to Washington, by barge and thence by march over the historic route of the Northern army to the battlefields of Gettysburg.

Equipped with the most modern and up-to-date war machinery this column of Marine troops will pass through the same villages and over the same roads that marked the Union Army's journey north to Gettysburg when it kept between the Confederate Army and the National Capitol.

Last year the Marine Corps East Coast Expeditionary Force journeyed to the Wilderness and in and around Fredericksburg simulated those Civil War battles with modern implements of war. This year the East Coast Expeditionary Force will stage a longer and more strenuous march and more extensive maneuvers when they will march to Gettysburg and simulate battle scenes on those famous battlefields of Pennsylvania.

The troops will maneuver as a brigade and will be in command of Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, Commanding Officer of the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Virginia.

A full month will be taken for the journey to Gettysburg, and maneuvers, and the return to the base at Quantico, Va.

Approximately 3,000 Marine officers and men will be engaged in this demonstration, which will be witnessed by high Army and Navy officers, Congressmen, Government officials and representatives of foreign countries.

It will demonstrate the fitness of the Marine for any undertaking that might come his way and will show the benefit of the intensive training that is given the Marine at Parris Island, S. C., Training Station and the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

The column on its march will prepare all its own food and will use "dog" tents to sleep in at night. The Quartermaster Corps will keep in touch with the base and keep the troops supplied with necessary articles during the march and the stay at Gettysburg.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED BY SECOND DIVISION ASSOCIATION

At the annual business session of the Second Division Association held Wednesday morning at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Virginia, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Major General Wendell C. Neville, U. S. M. C., President; Colonel W. W. Bessell, U. S. A., Vice-President; Mr. John A. Holabird, Treasurer; Mr. W. W. Winship, Secretary; the Rev. Jason N. Pierce, Chaplain.

THREE OFFICERS GRADUATED BY MARINE CORPS INSTITUTE

Captain Thomas P. Cheatham, U. S. M. C., Lieutenant William C. Hall, U. S. M. C., and Lieutenant Carl Gardner, U. S. M. C., have been graduated by the Marine Corps Institute during the past week and have been awarded diplomas by the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa.

Captain Cheatham completed the Foreign Trade Course, Lieutenant Hall completed the Complete Automobile Course, and Lieutenant Gardner completed the Ocean Navigation Course.

Captain Cheatham and Lieutenant Gardner are attached to the Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., and are serving with the Marine Corps Institute, while Lieutenant Hall is on duty at the Marine Barracks, Naval Submarine Base, New London, Conn.

ANOTHER OLD TIME MARINE

Ex-marines are to be found all over the country engaged in every conceivable occupation, some prominent, some obscure, some wealthy and some not so well off, but all glad to talk about the days when they wore the uniform of a Marine. Some of these are very well known public men like Secretary Denby, Major Daniel Sullivan, Chief of Police of Washington, D. C., and Colonel Forbes, director of the Veterans' Bureau, who began his service as a Marine Trumpeter in the days when the "musics" wore the red coats.

One of the oldest ex-marines to be heard from is George Burton Green, Postmaster of Jefferson, Colorado, and former welterweight champion. Mr. Green enlisted in the Navy in 1884 serving on the old Michigan, which was one of the side-wheelers of our old Navy. After three years' service Mr. Green enlisted in the Marine Corps, serving from 1887 to 1891.

Mr. Green began his career as a boxer while in the Corps. In those days it was customary to fight without gloves and his first fight was a ten-round bout on the dock near his ship with bare knuckles. After leaving the Marine Corps he gave his time to the fighting game, becoming welterweight champion in '97 and '98.

STUDENT IN RUSSIAN ISLANDS FINISHES SALESMANSHIP COURSE

Private George W. Hislop, serving with the Marine Detachment at the U. S. Naval Radio Station, Russian Islands, Siberia, is the first of the long distance students to complete a course in the Marine Corps Institute.

Private Hislop completed the Salesmanship Course of the Publicity Schools of the Marine Corps Institute in approximately 11 months. He sent in on an average of 2 papers every month and once he got started his answer papers come in just as regular as the students who were next door instead of on "top of the world" as he is.

This far-off station of the United States Naval service is so isolated and there is so little opportunity for liberty or pleasure of the kind that is enjoyed by the Marine in other posts that the kind of recreation the men at that station enjoy is study and every man of them is a student of the Marine Corps Institute, thoroughly enjoying the opportunity for study that the courses afford.

This is a concrete example of the benefits of the correspondence method of teaching. What opportunity would the men at this station, thousands of miles away, have for study if it were not for the correspondence courses they are taking through the Marine Corps Institute.

MORE M. C. I. GRADUATES

Eight enlisted men of the Marine Corps have been awarded diplomas by the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa., after completing a course in the Marine Corps Institute and successfully passing the final examination of the course during the past week. The names of the men, next of kin, home address and course completed, follow:

Gunnery Sergeant Spencer H. Miser, mother, Mrs. Cora E. Miser, Delhi, Calif., Special Poultry Course.

Sergeant Maurice Zakon, sister, Mrs. Clara Rubin, 255 East Kirby Avenue, Detroit, Mich., Surveying and Mapping Course.

Sergeant Arthur L. Yeam, mother, Mrs. Ella Yeam, 621 Pacific Avenue, Long Beach, Calif., Citrus Fruit Growing Course.

Corporal Andrew Hendrickson, father, Mr. Nela J. Hendrickson, Kildare, Okla., Civil Engineering Course.

Private 1st Class Walter Isaacs, mother, Mrs. Mary Isaacs, Buffalo Horn, Saskatchewan, Canada, Farm Crops Course.

Private 1st Class Terry H. Milby, father, Mr. Amphra G. Milby, 1233 Fairfield Avenue, Fort Wayne, Ind., Salesmanship Course.

Trumpeter James T. Tichacek, mother, Mrs. Marie Tichacek, Summit, Ill., Salesmanship Course.

Private George E. Clevenger, mother, Mrs. Mattie M. Clevenger, Excelsior Springs, Mo., Livestock Course.

The performance of a service to the world that satisfies your own conscience and stimulates your own intellect, is the only career worth striving for and the only position in life that will insure success.

THE SILENT PARTNER.

REVEILLE AT THE "Y"

Leathernecks and Gobs who stroll into the Naval Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, N. Y., with the intention of spending the night ashore will enjoy the comparative luxury of sleeping in a regular bed. They may also enjoy the use of a shower bath, pool room, writing room and the various entertainments that are provided if they are so inclined. Incidentally they will hear, without a doubt, one of the strangest Reveilles that ever sounded on either land or sea.

The "Y" has a system of waking tardy sleepers that is all its own. Precisely at 6 a. m. and 7 a. m. the "anvil chorus" (we call it that for lack of a better name), starts its racket. Four men in single file pace the corridors. The leader is equipped with a "clapper," which he twirls round and round, making a noise like the breaking up of a hard winter. Next comes a man rattling a string of half a dozen cowbells. He is followed by the ringer of a large dinner bell. Last of all comes a man with a megaphone, shouting the hour and the old familiar "Rise and shine-up all hammocks!"

The Leatherneck or Gob who can sleep through that racket would never pass the hearing test at a recruiting station. If pandemonium ever really breaks loose, it's going to buck up against some strong competition at the "Y."

It is a corking good system, at that, to insure getting back to the ship or barracks on time, but the Marine who is on furlough and figures on sleeping right 'round the clock will be S. O. L. in the early morning hours unless he's equipped with a pair of brass earmuffs.

Music Hath Charms

I love to hear the music of the trombone,
And to hear the "um-pah" of the big base horn.

There's something that's appealing
And I get a creepy feeling
When the 'cello plays its doleful tunes forlorn.

I'm fond of Wagner, Liszt and Bach and Chopin,
Who wrote the music that the world can praise,

But I never feel quite jolly
And it makes me melancholy
When I hear the dreamy sobbing of their lays.

But, Oh, Boy! If you want to get me started,

If you want to see my feet go pit-a-pat,
See my fingers start to rapping,
While my toes the floor is tapping, Hear me whistle, watch me hop out of my snap!

Play me something that is bright and
quick and snappy,

Give me something that no other music has;

Let that old band start aplaying,
See my shoulders start aawayng
When they "whoop 'er up" and play a bit of jazz!

When Marines First Wore Khaki

Hot weather finds the Marines once more in khaki. The first troops of any nation to use khaki were British soldiers on duty in India. Apparently the first time these hot-weather uniforms were worn by Marines was in Spanish-American days, when a Marine Battalion was stationed at Key West, Florida, preparing to leave for Cuba. Captain (now Brigadier-General) Charles L. McCawley wrote to the Major General Commandant in part: "It was while at this camp that there arrived campaign suits of brown linen, which you had procured.
Their issue was hailed with the greatest satisfaction by the officers and men, who had been sweltering for weeks under a tropical sun."

Something was Said

One of those clear, lucid conversations recently occurred within the hearing of the writer. The company clerk and room orderly had got into a mix-up, and the room orderly was trying to make things clear, as follows: "Did you say, or did you not say what I said you said,
because the first sergeant said you said
you never said what I said you said.

Now, if you said you did not say what I said you said you said, then for the love of mike what did you say?"

The First to Cuss

When Adam, in bliss,
Asked Eve for a kiss
She puckered her lips with a coo;
And the answer that came Changed the sound of his name,
"I don't care, Adam, if I do."

Here's a Deep One

First Marine: I looked all over Quantico this morning, trying to find some bird who'd lend me some money at "two for one."

Second Marine: That's nothing. I saw a non-com this morning looking for "quarters" for his "better half."

On the Trail of Casabianca

Synopsis: The plot thickens. Fifi Flapperino, the peerless belle of Port-au-Prince, has been captured by the voodoo worshippers. Devil Dog Dave, of whom Fifi is fond, after being rescued by the bandits has been shipwrecked in the Caribbean. As the cruel waters of the Caribbean close over the head of Dave, let us return for a moment to Fifi—

The voodoo worshippers abruptly ended their ceremonies. They proceeded to march farther into the forest. Slung across the shoulders of two husky natives was a wicker basket. Through its meshes Fifi could see a wriggling serpent.

Fifi struggled to release herself from the grip of her captors, but it was useless. She was forced to take up the trail with the ignorant savages, steeped in the superstitious lore of voodooism.

"Traitor," muttered one of the natives, as he gave Fifi's wrist a vicious twist. "We go to worship the Great snake. . . . Its poisonous fangs must first pierce the breast of a Haitian maiden. . . . You are chosen for the honor. . . . You must die. . . . The great high priest has so decreed."

Fifi shuddered. The native rambled on:

"The white Americano, David de la canine devil, will suffer a worse fate. He will be boiled in the oil of a thousand serpents. It is he who pursueth Casabianca, great among the true worshippers of the Sacred Voodoo."

Through the meshes of the basket Fifi could see the beady eyes of the serpent. It writhed and hissed and thrust out its forked tongue. Fifi trembled at the thought of her coming fate. . . . she closed her eyes and struggled blindly on.

Suddenly a piercing cry rang through the forest. In a moment all was confusion. The natives gathered together in excited little groups, chattering like magpies.

The tropical foliage parted and Fifi saw four figures bearing an inanimate body on a stretcher. A group of natives were following the stretcher, chattering volubly. Fifi and her two guards drew closer.

Horror! On the stretcher lay Dave. . . . his face deathly pale . . . a deep cut showed the marks of a cruel blow.

He opened his eyes and muttered weakly, "Water, water." Then he saw Fifi looking at him with horror-stricken eyes.

For a moment Dave thought he was lost.

"GET UP AND GIT"

John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, tells a story worth remembering. In a little southern town, he says, a hound dog sat one hot day in the middle of the road, howling dismally. A passing stranger, puzzled by the great and hidden sorrow which the dog seemed to be expressing, stopped and asked of a native who was lounging nearby:

"What's the matter with the dog; is he sick?"

"Nope," replied the native, "that hound ain't sick; he aire jest a-sittin' on a cockle-burr."

Much of the wailing that is heard in this world is done by people who, so to speak, are sitting on cockle-burrs and lack the common sense to get up. For instance, there is the sort of man who holds the notion that he has no chance for advancement. Two workmen were discussing a young man who spent his noon hours in studying the job higher up.

"Oh, Jim's all right," said one of the men, "but he hasn't got the right idea. I want to get ahead just as well as he does, but I'm no fool. There's no use in ordinary fellows like us trying to land at the top of the business. All the good jobs will go to the boss's son, or somebody else who has a pull."

What holds back a man of that kind is not altogether a lack of ambition; chiefly it is lack of faith. In the first place it is lack of faith in the commonsense foundation of business, a failure to realize that the shrewd business man would no more lose a chance to hire and promote a workman of unusual worth than he would lose the chance to buy a machine that could cut down his cost of operation. He could not afford to. With the workman who was "no fool," it was also lack of faith in his own ability to do by persistent effort things much finer than he had ever done before. He decided against himself in advance; he refused to give himself a chance to make good.

After all, faith in one's self is very much like faith in a financial proposition. We invest only in those things which seem likely to be successful; we refuse to spend our time in studying if we have made up our minds beforehand that the power of succeeding is not in us. But just as we never get dividends from a stock in which we have refused to invest, so it is certain that we cannot profit from our ability if we have refused to invest in that. Strangely enough the very men who will not believe in themselves are often the ones who expect their employers to believe in them. Feeling themselves to be "gold bricks," they are indignant if others do not regard them as gilt edge investments.

In one sense, though, there is all the difference in the world between financial investments and investments of time and study in one's own future. There are good financial propositions and there are bad ones; but every man is worth all the effort that he can devote to his own improvement.

If you have a good purpose, don't be afraid to follow it. Don't tell your friends why your ambition is blasted; keep it from being blasted. You will get farther toward your goal by plodding steadily ahead than by sitting on a cockle-burr and howling.

Director, Mass. Dept. of Education.

I. C. S. ADDS NEW COURSE

A new course has been added to the general curriculum of the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa., and will soon be available also to the students of the Marine Corps institute. The course is General Foremanship and the class letters are BIW. An order of studies for this course is now being printed and the course will soon be open to enrollment of students.

AN INEXPENSIVE LIBERTY

Six Marines in Quantico desired to visit the neighboring town of Fredericksburg. Influenced both by the high cost of transportation and by the desire to harden themselves for the coming Gettysburg maneuvers, they decided to hike the twenty-five miles.

The party left Quantico at ten in the morning and reached Fredericksburg that evening. They purchased supplies on the way, lunched on sardines, crackers, weiners, bread, and well water, and dined upon two cans of beans, two cans of tomatoes, two loaves of bread, and more well water.

They washed in a stream just outside of Fredericksburg and after an evening in the town slept in the park. The Marines who made this hike are: Privates Muschack, Meahan, Vaughn, Maurer, Carpenter, and Jalosky.

Since its establishment the Marine Corps Institute has received a total of 60,000 lesson papers. As there are an average of fifteen questions to a paper 90,000 questions have been graded and corrected by the instructors assigned to that duty.

Do You Know

That a bridge has been designed to span the Hudson River at New York which will be the most important gateway to the West? Its lower deck will carry 12 railroad tracks, its upper deck roadway, two and a half times as wide as Fifth Avenue, will take care of 16 streams of vehicles. There will still be room on the upper deck for four surface car lines and two sidewalks. Although the bridge will cost $130,000,000 it is believed it will pay for itself by cutting the cost of bringing goods across the Hudson from $2.28 to 50 cents a ton.

That it is said the game of golf was invented by Scotch shepherds, who, having nothing else to do, amused themselves by knocking stones about with their crooks? They measured off their holes in circles, because in that way they could keep watch over their herds. The holes were marked by a tag of wool attached to a stake.

That efforts are to be made during the coming summer to retrieve some of the $15,000,000 worth of specie which sank in the sea when the Laurentic was torpedoed during the war by a German submarine near Lough Swilly, Donegal? Previous salvage operations saved approximately two-thirds of the treasure and specially trained divers from the British navy are expected to recover the rest. The vessel lies in about 20 fathoms of water and the huge boilers rolling about make operations hazardous.

That according to a German official document published recently, the number of submarines lost by that government during the war was 199, including boats sunk, interned and captured?

That guarded by two United States Government cutters, the Pacific seal herd is moving from the South Pacific to the summer rendezvous on the Pribilof Islands in the middle of Bering Sea? This is the only herd known to be in existence with the exception of a small colony that summers on the Commander Islands, off the coast of Kamchatka, Siberia. After June 15 the herd will have passed into Bering Sea and three other coast guard vessels will then maintain a rigid guard there.

That Argentina is more than five times the size of Germany, and has approximately 8,500,000 inhabitants, according to best estimates?

That the withdrawal of a single steel rivet from an ocean steamship with a displacement of 25,000 tons can be detected by a new method perfected by the Bureau of Standards?

That New York now has more than $11,000,000 available for building roads in that state?

That Japan's salt supply comes entirely from sea water, which is drained on artificial marshes?

That an airplane compass, believed to be the first completely satisfactory type, has been invented by experts of the Bureau of Standards? The idea of the revolving coiled wire is used instead of the magnetic needle. The compass responds instantly to the quick turns or evolutions of an airplane.

That engineering and carpentry will be taught the natives of New Guinea soon? The New Guinea Central Labor administration plans to equip the islands with skilled native labor and eventually hopes to train the natives in every trade.

That ninety-eight per cent of the land in Alaska is national property?

That Luther Burbank's latest addition to the plant world is a new blackberry known as the "thornless blackberry"? The cane has no thorns and the fruit is larger and more delicious than the ordinary blackberry.

That a beaver colony on the east fork of the Hood River in Oregon recently felled a tree 18 inches in diameter across a power line of the Pacific Power & Light Company, plunging the entire countryside into darkness?

What Will You Be Doing One Year From Today?

Three hundred and sixty-five days from now—what?

Will you still be struggling along in the same old job at the same old salary—worried about the future—never quite able to make both ends meet—standing still while other men go ahead?

One year from today will you still be putting off your start toward success—thrilled with ambition one moment and then cold the next—delaying, waiting, fiddling away the precious hours that will never come again?

Don't do it, man—don't do it.

There is no greater tragedy in the world than that of a man who stays in the rut all his life, when with just a little effort he could bring large success within his grasp.

Make up your mind today that you're going to train yourself to do some one thing well. Choose the work you like best in the list below, mark an X beside it, mail the coupon to Scranton, and we will send you, without cost or obligation, the full story of what the I.C.S. can do for you.

Right now you can decide where you will be in 1923.

Common sense will tell you that it is far better to send in this Success Coupon today than to wait another precious year and then wish you had!
